

Release Note 7th of April 2016

New features

- Grading: Share annotations with the candidates
- Author: Trash for questions and question sets
- Essay questions: Define the maximum number of words candidates can write

Improvements

- Annotation: Improved interface
- Planner: Possible to create empty question set and share with author

Share annotations with students

Planners can now share grader comments from the Deliver tool. This setting can be changed at any time. Shared comments are accessed by students through the student Dashboard.

Grader comments

Share comments and correct answers with candidate. Learn more.

Not shared.

Comments are private to each grader.

Shared with candidate.

Available for candidates with status Graded.

Deliver settings for an exam

How it works

- Only candidates with status "Graded" will be able to access the comments
- Candidates will only have access to comments on their own submission
- Only commented questions will be shared with the candidate
- In automatic questions, correct answers will be visible to the candidate

Trash questions and question sets

All questions and question sets can now be moved to the Trash. Previously it was possible to delete questions and question sets, but it was only possible to delete the content that was not in use, and the rules for when the user actually could delete the content were hard to understand.

How it works

- If content is moved to the Trash while currently in use, it will not affect the Test
- Content moved to the Trash will only be hidden, never deleted
- Content can always be restored from the Trash

Shared items can be trashed and restored by anyone with editing access.

Set maximum allowed words in essays

You can limit the maximum number of words the students are allowed to write. The limit will be visible to the students and they will get notified when the limit is reached.
